The story of the arrest of the murderer ratt's ware brought in least of the four prisoners from Jaratt's ware brought in least of least.

Emporia was stirred to-day as it never was before. Walter Cotton, the colored murderer, who, while under sen-tence of death, escaped from the Portsmeuth jail, and who has confers ed to several of the crimes recently committed in this vicinity, is in the jail, and it is about him that all of the jail, and it is about him that all of the jail, and it is about him that all of the turbulence centred. He was arrested at Stony Creek, about twenty miles from Emporia, about 8 o'clock this morning, and brought here direct and placed within the jail. It became noised about that he had been apprehended, and an immense crewd congregated about the court-house, armed to the teeth, and ready and anxious to convene the court of Judge Lynch forthwith. Wise heads prevailed, however, and it was decided to delay the lynching until such information the lynching until such information as could be secured from Cotton im-plicating others was gotten.

not comply with the request unless it came through the sheriff, whereupon Sheriff S. W. Lee united in the request The Governor had ordered Company B, of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, in readiness et their armory, and as soon as the Sheriff's telegram was sent to him the troops were dispatched on a special over the Atlantic Coast Line, which came through on unusually tast time. The fact that treeps were on the way soon became known, and runners were sent to the South End of the county to notify the great mass of people who had congregated about the graves of Magistrate J. W. Saunders and Mr. J. N. Melton, who lost their lives in an effort to eap-ture Cotton on Thursday. As rapidly as possible the crowd began to return to the court-house, but the military arrived first. Major Sol. Cutchins, who came with the troops, by request of the Governor, had a conference with Sheriff Lee and Judge Goodwyn, and suggested that Cotton and the and suggested that Cotton and the white tramp, Brandt O'Grady, who were then in jail, be sent at once to Richmond in custody of the militia. The Judge feared that this course would presipitate bloodshed, and while he was in conference with Major Cutchins two prominent county officials entered and told him that if any effort was made to remove the open fire on the militis, and that his (the Judge's) life would be placed

A TACIT AGREEMENT.

It was then agreed that the prisoners should not be moved, and it was tacitly understood that this agree-ment would be accepted by the mob, and that they would await a speedy trial. Quiet reigned until 4 o'clock, when a posse, which had been organwhen a posse, which had been organized for the purpose, drove up to the jail with four prisoners—Frank Delaney, aged 62; Jim Delaney, aged 15, and Robert Delaney, aged 13, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and James Edgar Clay, of Spartanburg—all of whom Cotton identified as having been in some manner implicated in the murder of Barker Blick in February last. The arrival of these prisoners and The arrival of these prisoners and their indentification by Cotton caused before dark the excitement, and just before dark the crowd in Emporia as-sembled for organization. The meet-ing was held behird closed doors and no one would reveal aught that took place. Information subsequently reached Judge Goodwyn that an attack upon the jail had been agreed upon and in a few minutes a courier entered the town and gave information that 200 men were marching frem Plasant Shade, and a like number were forming about trhee miles below the town to reinforce those already about the court-house.

INCREASED THE GUARD.

Captain Daughtrey, of the Blues, inereated his guard, and gave his sen-tries positive metruetions to permit no citizen on the court-green or within fifty yards of the jail. Judge Goodwyn wired Governor Tyler for addi-

[Dispatch, March 24th.]

The terrible excitement that has held sway in Greeneville county for the last forty-eight hours in consequence of the killing of Justice-of-the-Peace Saunders and Mr. Welton, came near culminating in the lynching of their colored murderer this morning. As soon as it was known that the murderer had been arrested the infuriated of their colored murderer this morning. DARK AS BREBUS.

It is dark as Erebus on the courtgreen, and all is as quiet as can bay yet the stillness is taken as a foreboo-ing of evil, and if a rush is made on the jail by the mob, it would be hard in the darkness for the troops to hold the fort. It has just been reported to the judge that dynamite has been secured by the would-be lynchers, and that an effort will be made to blow the jail open.
At 9 o'clock to-night a party of prominent citizens, headed by ex-Judge Barham, waited upon Judge Goodwyn, and requested him to have the troops withdrawn from Emporia They advised him that half a thousand determined men were moving on the town, and that unless the military was with-drawn there would be bloodshed. Major Cutchins and Sheriff Lee were present at the conference, and it was finally agreed that the troops should be withdrawn, and that a local guard of twenty-five should be appointed to surround the jail, the citizens on their part pledging that order should be

THE SHERIFF SPEAKS.

Ex-Judge Barham communicated this agreement to the crowd around the court-house, and besought them to disparse to their homes. This they finally agreed to do, with the understanding that the prisoners should be left at Emporia. Major Cutchins, at the request of Judge Barham, made a statement, asserting that the military did not seek to use force, and that he did not seek to use force, and that he would do anything that Sheriff Les orwould do anything that Sheriff Les ordered. The Sheriff then ascended to stile from which the others had spoken. He said: "Men of Greenville, you all know me. I would not tell you an untruth. The military shall be sent away from here by the first train. The body of Cotton shall be buried in this county, or else it will go to the State Anatomical Board from here. The

At 2:80 A. M., a small-sized crowd, headed by a brother of Mr. Welton, one of the murdered men, gathered at a corner of the court-house square, and listened to an address by Lawyer S. V. Southall, Jr., who counselled conservatism. He urged the men to go to their homes, and not to attempt to storm the jail. At first they refused to listen to reason, but finally consented to disperse, and apparently all danger of trouble to-night is over.

to-morrow, as the people seem determined that Cotton shall not be taken from Emporia alive. When the additional military arrive in the morning, an effort will be made to take Cotton to Richmond, and then trouble is locked for.

THE CALL FOR TROOPS.

The first telegram, dispatched from Stony Creek at 10:28, announced the capture of Walter Cotton, and suggested that he be sent to Petersburg for safe-keeping. It read as follows:

"Emporia, Va., March 23--10:28 A Governor Tyler, Richmond, Va. : "Have prisoner at Stony Oreek sent to Petersburg jail. Mob will lynch prisoner if he should come on freight train here.

W. Samuel Goodwyn, Judge." Governor Tyler at once replied:

"Direct officers to take prisoner to Petersburg."

Ten minutes later Judge Goodwyn sent the following telegram:

"Emporia, Va., Mar. 23-10:88 A. M. Governor Tyler:
"If prisoner is brought here this morning on 11 o'clock train, mob will lynch him. Please send company of soldiers here at ones to protect him. The company can come from Franklin.

The Governor answered:

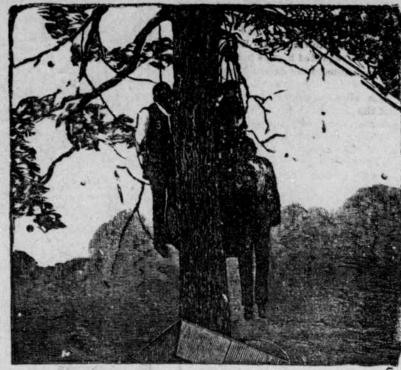

"Judge W. Samuel Goodwyn, Emporia, Va.:
"Will get troops there as soon as possible. Keep this quiet.
J. Hogg Tylsz, Governor."

THE BLUES ORDERED OUT.

The call was issued for Company B. of the Blues, to turn out, and in a few minutes after 11 o'clock messengers were hurrying in all directions to get the men together. The response was very prompt and highly commendable. A special train, composed of two care and an engine, was soon in readness,
